

A POSITIVE END TO THE YEAR

Positive returns across the risk spectrum

Markets. Credit spreads tightened by 43 basis points in the High Yield (HY) market in Q4. Accrued interest, spread tightening and lower government bond interest rates all contributed to the positive return. The benchmark delivered a return of 4.87% for the quarter, bringing the 2023 return up to 9.04%.

The High Yield market saw declining credit spreads from mid-October, reflecting shifts in risk sentiment, which continued to year end. Both risky and risk-free assets saw significant gains as government bond interest rates declined on the back of continued global disinflation combined with signals that a 'soft landing' or mild recession is more likely than not. Business confidence showed a stabilization in the otherwise declining confidence earlier in the year in the U.S., UK, and Europe, however still indicating negative growth in Europe and slight growth in the U.S.

In mid-December, the Federal Reserve (Fed) presented its updated estimates for growth and inflation in 2024, which were largely unchanged compared to the estimates presented in September. The Fed's own expectations for changes in the policy rate in 2024 were changed on the margin. Now a change of -75bp is expected compared to -50bp indicated in the September report. At the press conference, J. Powell stated that "Rate cuts are something that is beginning to come into view and clearly a topic of discussion". With this statement from the central bank governor, market participants were confirmed in their already high expectations for the start of a new monetary easing cycle in 2024.

Positive return ahead of benchmark in 2023

The Portfolio delivered a positive return of 4.24% in Q4, which was 0.62 percentage points behind the benchmark. In 2023 the fund has returned 10.22%, which was 1.18 percentage points ahead of the benchmark.

The most positive sector contributions relative to the benchmark came from Financials and Consumer Staples, while Consumer Discretionary and Industrials contributed most negative. The positive contribution from Financials came primarily from companies within debt collection and consumer lending, which again had a good quarter due to a better economic outlook and lower rates that make it easier for the lenders to pay back debt. Within Consumer Staples it was primarily a UK discount retailer that did very well in the quarter and contributed positively. The negative contribution from both Consumer Discretionary and Industrials was primarily a result of the underweight to the sectors. The portfolio's relative return was negatively affected by the falling interest rate in the quarter, as the duration of the portfolio is lower than that of the benchmark.

In Q4, nine positions were called. 14 positions were sold, with the majority in the Energy sector and more specifically the sub-sector Oil & Exploration. The proceeds were invested in 12 new issues and six new bonds and increasing current positions. The changes increased the funds' overall duration and weights in Industrials, Technology and Materials, while reducing the weight in Energy. The fund enters the new year with a higher credit spread and lower duration than the benchmark.
